This is a story I want to write with you.

I will often give you options for a question in the comments and if you also have ideas, you can also write them in. The comment(s) with the most hearts wins and I'll put it in the chapters, but I decide as a writer what I can and can't write, which is especially the case with the character of the characters because I have to put myself in their shoes.

There are no major differences between the German and English versions. I have to make a German and an English version because otherwise I don't know how the other language is supposed to reach the book.

If I come up with anything else, I'll let you know.

World and book building

Where should the story take place?

When should the story take place if it is like our world?

Should I describe the body of Reich and Soviet more human-like or more ball-like?

How should the character of the two be?

How well do the two know each other at the beginning of the story?

How should they get to know each other?

Should I put more real or more drawn pictures in the book?

What should their families and friendships be like?

How do friends and families feel about the two?

How should the relationship between Reich and Soviet develop?

Is one physically handicapped or has mental problems?

Should the English and the German version be two different stories?

In summary

I summarized the ideas I got, if you agree or want to change something feel free to let me know:

- It's supposed to be set in the world of "Jeder ändert sich (Everyone changes)"

- It's a Countryhumans story

- Soviet: Stubborn, Gentle, Sensitive, Calm

- Reich: Shy, Brave, Loving, Compassionate and also slightly aggressive

- From unknown to friends, to enimies, to friends, to lovers

- I'm supposed to more drawings than pictures when I do some

- Reich should get paranoia

- Please agree on whether the German and the English versions should be different. In the end I will translate both into the other language.

My suggestions:

- Countryhumans can become Countryballs and get the size of my two cuddly friends
